

Kaixaviah

Text: Jaqui O'Sullivan and Kate Samson

Illustration: Sandra Isaksson

Once upon a time in a far away land called Kaixaviah, there lived a beautiful blue bird called Olive.

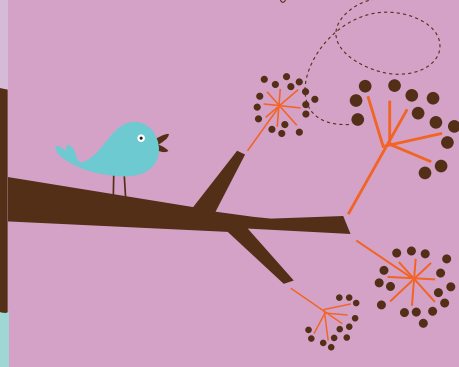

One sunny morning Olive awoke to thundering vibrations that nearly knocked her off her perch.

She looked up over the hill and saw a sea of angry red bulldozers. They were chopping down all the trees!

If there were no trees left the land would die. The animals would have nowhere to live, the children no place to play and the wild berries no where to grow...

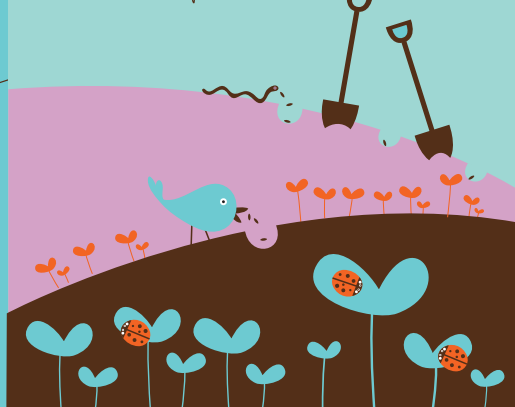

Much to Olive's delight two girls called Maya and Lily heard her cries for help. Maya had a thought...

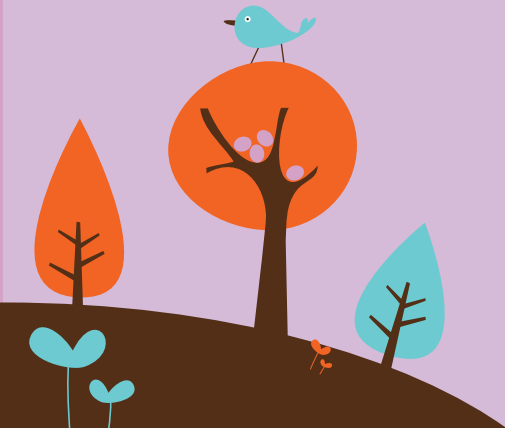

To save the land they would hide seeds in all the children's clothing. Then they could plant the seeds to help re-grow the forest and save Kaixaviah.

The children began to plant the seeds. Olive and the other animals came to help.

The forest slowly started to grow and soon blossomed. The land of Kaixaviah was saved!

three little trees &
Isak

2008

Story: Jaqui O'Sullivan & Kate Samson
Illustration: Sandra Isaksson